

3/7/09

Gardner -

In response to Mrs. Leving: My opinions:

- 1) Brant - "Par. puppies are healthier?!... The older stable puppy mill dogs must be at death's door, if his statement is true!"
- 2) Keller Perry Co - the virus Parvo isn't transmitted by the human consumer to his new pet, nor is a congenital illness. The fault of the consumer is lack of knowledge regarding puppy mill breeders who only show one or two puppies.
- 3) Yarnall Jr. - 1989 Lab Study?? Larger cages let dogs stretch out + move around (if they are healthy + happy).

Again - good breeders need not worry about any changes. Each one cares about his breed and will interview + screen + screen + interview his prospective buyer. They won't "be tripped" because they know that dogs are companion animals.

A Jan Kellerbauer

RECEIVED

2007 MAR 16 PM 1:36

INDEPENDENT REGULATORY REVIEW COMMISSION