INDEPENDENT REGULATORY

PROPOSED RULE REGARDING SALES OF HYPODERMIC NEEDLES AND RE: SYRINGES

Dear Ms. Zimmerman:

I write as the state representative in the 182nd District and a long-time HIV/AIDS activist to say that I strongly support your effort to bring Pennsylvania's syringe access regulations into line with national norms and practices. The Board's proposed change comports with public health best practices and will save the lives of Pennsylvanians without increasing crime or drug use. But while I generally support the proposed change, I would like to see your regulations go further with respect to limiting the number of syringes sold in any one transaction to 30 and requiring a prescription for purchasers under 18 years old.

1. The Proposed Change Will Bring Pennsylvania into Line with Other States

I have relied on the research conducted by Scott Burris, Jon S. Vernick, Alyssa Ditzler, and Steffanie Strathdee, in the The Legality of Selling or Giving Syringes to Injection Drug Users, 42 J. American Pharmaceutical Association S13 (2002).

No other state has a pharmacy regulation requiring a prescription for the purchase of syringes by adults. Only two states (NJ and DE) still require prescriptions for all adult purchasers by statute.

Most states do not significantly regulate the sale of syringes. Experience has shown that leaving syringe sales to the discretion of the pharmacist or other retail dealer does not create problems of social order or public health.

- The most common limit, found in 22 jurisdictions, is that needles may only be sold at retail in
- Fifteen require special record-keeping of syringe sales.
- Eleven require a purchaser to show ID.
- Eleven limit how syringes may be displayed for sale (i.e., require that they be behind the counter or in a locked case).
- Nine require the seller to determine that the buyer has a legitimate medical purpose.

The proposed change in Pennsylvania's existing syringe prescription regulation would place the Commonwealth well within the mainstream of pharmacy policy in the United States. Given the apparent lack of problems in states that do not regulate syringe sales through the pharmacy code, such a course would be an efficient use of regulatory resources.

2. The Proposed Change Will Not Interfere with Law Enforcement Efforts

The repeal of the prescription regulation will not have any effect on the Pennsylvania drug paraphernalia statute, 35 Pa. Cons. Stat. § 780-113(a) (33). Pharmacists are not and have never been involved in trafficking drug paraphernalia. Selling syringes to individual drug users in the normal course of business does not threaten public welfare, but rather promotes public health. It is a common practice throughout the country. There is no reported case anywhere in Pennsylvania or in the nation of a pharmacist being prosecuted, let alone convicted, for violating a paraphernalia law by selling syringes to a drug user.

3. Reservations: 30 syringes, Minors

The proposed change will surely benefit public health. The limitation of syringes sold in any one transaction to 30 is NOT justified by public health or public safety considerations. While 30 is an ample number, the national public health goal of ensuring that a new, sterile syringe is used for each injection is better served by imposing no limit. Syringes are often sold in boxes of 100 or more, so both convenience and price might move a drug user to buy more than 30 syringes in any one pharmacy visit. The limits, which have also been imposed in several other states that have removed statutory prescription requirements, are politically motivated rather than driven by evidence.

The question of non-prescription access for minors is a difficult one. I would like the Board to reconsider its requirement of a prescription for people under 18 for three reasons:

- I can envision circumstances in which access to a syringe would save a young drug user's life;
- There is NO evidence that syringe access encourages youth drug abuse; and
- I have ample faith in the good judgment and discretion of pharmacists to appropriately deal with such a situation.

I find it most ironic that in this commonwealth an individual can buy any number of firearms in one transaction, but then we are limited the number of life saving syringes and needles that can be purchased. Nevertheless, I applaud the Board's decision and support the adoption of this regulation.
