The price of fuel is enough reason to not idle. And I believe that Police have too much to do already. I don't believe a truck driver who is buying his own fuel is idling any more than he has to. But if you must have an anti-idling law please remember some valid reasons to idle. First, to be warm or cool enough to obtain quality sleep. Second, to keep my food from spoiling. Third to keep pets from extreme exposure. Fourth, to operate heavy current draw equipment. My sleeper is my house. I think you should consider requiring all residents of PA to shut off their main power switch while the home is vacant. That is what you are mandating that truckers do. One day people are going to get sick and tired of the heavy intrusion of government.
