REVIEW COMMISSIONSubject: testing

I am 67 years old and on Social Security. If testing had been in these systems when I graduated I might have faired a little better in the work place and would have had a better income now. I want my grandchildren to be better equipped for their future than I was. If I had not gone into the Army at 17 and learned respect and responsibility, I doubt that I would have survived as well as I did.

These kids are not capable of making life altering decisions when they are in school. It's already too late for them after they graduate without all of the best qualifications. It is the responsibility of the school board, parents, and the state to make these decisions for them.

If the parents don't want their kids to do this, then it's should be the parents responsibility to guarantee their retirement money when they retire.
