Sir:

I understand that the Milk Sanitation Regulation is being rewritten and is open for public comment. I wish to express my desire that cow and goat milk and products thereof such as but not limited to, keefer, yogurt and cheeses be available for sale to the public without being pasteurized. The sale of these products without pasteurization is the business of the seller and the informed buyer and not the business of the state and should not be subject to any governing regulations whatsoever. Time and again it is proven that "safe guards" instituted by state and federal governing mandates do in fact NOT ensure any kind of public health "safety"! But it is proven that pasteurization removes many of the natural nutritional health benefits of these products. Again, these products should be available for sale to the public without state prohibition or regulation.

Sincerely,
Michael Glover
