RE: Comments in Opposition to Final-Omitted Regulations #14-517 Revisions to the Special Allowance for Supportive Services Requirements

Dear Mr. Jewett:

On behalf of Interim House, Inc., I write to strongly oppose the Department of Public Welfare's recently proposed regulations that would severely and unnecessarily limit the availability of welfare-to-work supports for Pennsylvania families. This regulation, if approved, will undermine our efforts to help mothers become self sufficient and break the generational cycles of substance abuse, welfare, recidivism, violence and abuse that pervade the lives of the families we serve.

Interim House, Inc. (IHI) is a Philadelphia-based non-profit that provides residential, intensive outpatient, and outpatient substance abuse treatment for women, particularly low-income women. The mission of Interim House is to decrease substance abuse and promote independence and healthy lifestyles by providing a comprehensive continuum of services to address clients' physical, emotional, behavioral, familial, social, educational, vocational and spiritual needs. We recognizes that individuals who become dependent on alcohol and/or drugs usually experience other problems, including mental health problems, family dysfunction, poor peer relationships and support systems, and limited education or work experience. All treatment is highly individualized, gender and age-specific, and respects each client's cultural, racial, and ethnic differences.

Interim House serves over 160 women annually, and provides a comprehensive range of therapeutic, skill building, educational and vocational services to help women re-enter their communities as self-sufficient, productive citizens. IHI helps women to remain clean and sober, gain employment, reunite with their children, obtain permanent housing, and move toward self-sufficiency.

Special allowances allow families receiving TANF or food stamps to obtain employment, education, or training. Current TANF grants pay less than one-third of the poverty line. A family of three, for example, receives only $403 per month in most Pennsylvania counties. This is simply not enough to pay the costs families face when trying to better themselves and move off of welfare. The Department of Public Welfare's (DPW's) proposals would make it even more difficult for families to escape poverty.

We are most concerned with the following two proposals:

First, the new regulations would require families to spend any savings or funds on hand that they may have before they would qualify for a special allowance. Families sometime save up their money to pay next month's rent or utility bill or purchase school supplies for their children. This new regulation would require families to spend this money before qualifying for DPW assistance in purchasing a bus pass or other transportation costs, paying for GED testing fees, or buying textbooks for training classes. This regulation would frustrate families' attempts to improve their lives and may lead to homelessness and instability, when they should be focused most on bettering themselves through employment or training.

Second, the new regulations would impose low and arbitrary limits on the amount of special allowances that a family might receive. For example, an individual would only be able to receive $2,000 in her lifetime to spend on books and school supplies, and $1,500 per year on transportation (including costs for car insurance.) If a family wants to leave welfare for good and obtain a job that pays enough to be self-sufficient, the head of household may need adult basic education or vocational training. Often, there are costs, such as books, associated with these classes that she must pay. If DPW restricts the amount of special allowances that a TANF or food stamp recipient can receive, she will only be able to choose lesser quality job training or none at all. And if she reaches the maximum transportation payment, she may be forced to quit a job or stop looking for one. These arbitrary limits will prevent many people from making enough money to leave welfare behind.

Finally, we object to these regulations being submitted as "final" without the opportunity for advance public comment, with no urgent need to do so. These regulations affect the lives of thousands of Pennsylvanians, and deserve the careful consideration that the normal public comment process affords. We urge that these regulations be withdrawn and resubmitted as proposed regulations.

In this recession, Pennsylvanian families need more help—not less—to obtain quality education and training that will lead to self-sufficient jobs. This package of regulations will only hurt families as they try to work their way out of poverty. We urge the Independent Regulatory Review Commission to reject them.

Sincerely yours,

Kathy Wellbank Program Director
