Subject: NO wire flooring allowed in commercial kennels

Message:

I was recently informed that the Department of Agriculture has issued new regulations for commercial kennels, and that birthing and nursing dogs may be kept in enclosures with 50% wire flooring. Pennsylvania's new Dog Law has stated clearly that dogs over 12 weeks are NOT to be kept on wire flooring. Therefore, why is the Department of Agriculture allowed to issue their new regulations that go against the Dog Law?? Second, I think it goes to show that they do not have any respect or compassion for dogs and that they are willing to do get away with anything they can. They clearly do not have dogs best interest in mind. I do not think that they should have the freedom to not follow the Dog Law-- they are breeding dogs. Wire flooring is NOT acceptable for dogs that are kept in that environment for so long!
