INDEPENDENT REGULATORY
REVIEW COMMISSION

As a owner of a outside wood stove I would like to express my opinion of having looser gov. rules on these devices. I feel local communities are the ones to make the rules on these devices the more rural areas will have less restrictive rules and the higher populated areas will need more.
This is not a one size fits all big government issue.

Also with the higher taxes ect. many of us are just keeping our heads above water as home owners on social security and small pensions. Cutting and burning wood is a great saving on my utility bills. The outside wood stove is a safe economical way to heat my home and water. It is also my way of cutting back on fossil fuel and the use of foreign oil

I trust that the EOB will see that this is a local matter and leave it to our local government to handle.

William Payne

P.S. all wood I burn is collected from dead and downy trees on state land with the proper permits and fees which helps the state and makes our forests look much better.
