Me being a Outdoor Wood burner it is my concern with the new proposal. Is the expense you put into the owb. then now there trying to mandate a law that you got to put more money into. what is all ready a expensive purchase to get started. i put the stove in for me to save money after a few years of use to pay for its self by not buying fuel now i will have to put money back into it . so were i thought i was going to get ahead i'm not i guess there isn't a way to get a head now days with people looseing jobs with being run by state laws. because of a few people that are out spoken about alittle smoke. i just hope you put alittle research into what you are proposing. the osb burn does put off smoke but it only runs maybe once a hour for 5 minutes. i can under stand making some people rise there stacks in a town 2 feet above there house like a normal chimmey that put off constain smoke. i think the township you live in can make those calls. i think these stove could be a real benifit with the way you can use natural resources in dead wood instead off letting it rout a way and save on fuel. just for a couple peoples inconveince. can please everybody
