

2802

From: Freeman, Mark [Mark.Freeman@charlescoleshospital.com]
Sent: Friday, February 12, 2010 11:51 AM
To: EP, RegComments
Subject: Outdoor Wood Burners

To whom it may concern,

I have an outside wood burner it heats my hot water and my house, I live on 225 acres of land that I pay tax on. Your idea that one model fits all is not accurate at all. I can understand if you live in town or have house's next to each other, that is something different. I think that this could best be handled by local government, townships, borough's that's what they are there for. I think you people living south of route 80 should stay there and leave us alone. The state and fast Eddy have enough trouble trying to keep Philadelphia from falling apart. If this country would go back to Grassroots government (real people that know what's going on). I think this country would be a lot better off. If I were forced to not burn my woodstove it would put such a financial burden on my family that I would have to choose, eat or heat my house. Maybe I should just not work and go on Medical Assistance with food stamps and energy assistance. I know a lot of people that live just as good as I do and have not done an honest day's work in year's.

Mark Freeman