INDEPENDENT REGULATORY REVIEW COMMISSION

The information I have seen about the Environmental Quality Board proposed regulations sets ridiculous set back distances that seemed designed to virtually kill the use of outdoor wood fired boilers to provide primary central heat to homes. These boilers are ever so important in rural areas. The information sounds like there have been some problems when they are placed in suburban settings but the way it is set it will make them virtually impossible anywhere.

Please stop this effort and instead offer to assist counties or townships in setting there own local regulations. Or specifically allow local governments the option of overriding all distances with their own values.
