Hello, I'm currently enrolled at Lansdale School of Business for medical massage therapy. I understand there is a law close to passing that will severely limit the methods of therapeutic care I can give. I have just spent alot of money getting into this program, so obviously I am shocked at this news. This is a huge setback for us and I am hopeful this can be resolved favorably for the massage therapist. What will happent to the schools with this program if all of a sudden they can't teach us what we are paying for? Will I get a refund? There is already too much in place to yank the tablecloth out from under the schools and currently practicing massage therapists.

Thank you for your time.
