Please stop this regulation. The burden on the tax payers for unfunded and unsubstantiated programs is too high in these unstable economic times. Now is not the time to be placing a heavier load on the tax payers. based on the information speaking to CC, you'd think that all the money we already spend on education would already focus on standards for students to graduate with the required skills to succeed. What have they been doing all these years? If your going to spend $s on anything, why don't you spend it on computer technology program enhancements? this seems like another way for "academicians to justify their existance and paychecks. Tax payers hands are held to the fire to keep withing their budgets or pay the price..something our representatives should be doing.
