I am opposed to the pushing through of the Keystone tests for graduation and the adopting of national standards for our children. The older I get , the more I see that each child is an individual that needs individual attention. Our teachers already are teaching to the PSSA test with disappointing results and while trying to cope with many cuts. I don't see how they would take on the additional burden of redtape that the proposed acts would entail. I also resent the fact that these are being acted on at this time, in this week.
