

3068

Blackburn, Thomas

RECEIVED
IRRC

From: Jill Konosky [jill.konosky@gmail.com]
Sent: Tuesday, August 26, 2014 11:46 AM
To: ST, RegulatoryCounsel
Subject: PA rule change for CE chiropractic online courses

2014 AUG 29 AM 11: 43

It is completely inconvenient and unreasonable to limit the amount of CE courses a Doctor of Chiropractic can take online.

People are able to earn BS and high degrees completely through online courses. It makes no sense that a Doctor who has completed all educational and board requirements cannot do the same.

There are specific guidelines and time requirements set in place so that online courses are regulated, I see nothing wrong with a chiropractor using these courses at their own discretion and time commitment to stay active and current with their CE REQUIREMENTS. It is a serious inconvenience for a busy Doctor to leave a practice and/or family to attend set seminars and I don't see the need for that to become regulation.

All other medically based professions can use online courses at their discretion, and it wouldn't be discriminatory to say the least if you change only the chiropractic profession. We should be held to the same standards and any other medical professional.

Sincerely,
Jill Konosky DC

Sent from my iPhone