Subject: Limiting Online Continuing Education

It has come to my attention that the State Board of Chiropractic Examiners is considering a rule change to limit the amount of asynchronous online continuing education hours that we can take during a license renewal period.

I would like to state my OPPOSITION to this proposed rule change.

I recently completed some Pennsylvania approved courses online recently for the first time this year. Not only did I find it convenient, as well as costing less than attending a conference (travel, air fare, hotels, etc...), but I actually feel like I learned as much or more than attending a CE class in person. I understand for certain types of learning such as technique conferences, a hands on approach is necessary. I would ask, however, that you keep our options open as I feel I learned valuable information with increased retention.

Thank you for your consideration.
