Subject: Home school vaccine law

My child is homeschooled, He has autism and severe allergies.. He had a severe reaction to a vaccine called HIB.. He was rushed to the we where he was treated for respiratory and his eyes were swollen shut.. My son had all his mile stones met on time he crawled, walked, talked, and ate appropriate foods.. The day after his reaction he was like a different child.. He was seen at my pediatric office where the doctor noted extreme agitation, fever, and rash, It was that day we stopped further vaccines the doctor believed he is allergic to a preservative in the vaccine..As a parent who saw this happen to their child over night I would never vaccinate another child and feel it is completely unfair to take this right to choose from other parents.. If the parents choose to send their child to a Brick and mortar school where there are alot of children and exposed on a constant level then I agree you must vaccinate to go to the school but if the parent is choosing to home school they should not be forced to adhere to a law that is not pertinent to their situation and therefore should not be forced.. A yearly physical yes.. A yearly cleaning at the dentist yes, eye doctor every three yes but not to force a parent to inject their child with a potential poison.. This is from a mom with a child who was vaccine injured... Please don't force parents who homeschool their children to follow this rule..Thank you, Margaret
