I am a REALTOR(R) with an Associate Brokers license. I have been licensed in the Commonwealth for 28 years. The number one complaint I hear from buyers of real estate is that the closing costs are to high. The level of sales is precarious and to add another fee onto the process is too much. Why aren't funds from general revenue used to support this need? This is a community health issue, not necessarily a personal or property issue and so should be supported by the whole Commonwealth.
