

3202 Form Letter. E 50-57

Kathy Cooper

From: Kim Minger <info@actionnetwork.org>
Sent: Thursday, July 19, 2018 11:26 PM
To: Smolock, Bryan
Subject: I Support The New Overtime Rule

Bryan Smolock,

I am writing to express my strong support for the regulation proposed by the Pennsylvania Department of Labor and Industry to restore overtime pay for an estimated 465,000 workers by phasing in a requirement that Pennsylvania salaried workers earning below $47,892 automatically be eligible for overtime.

For decades after the passage of federal and state laws on overtime it was accepted that moderately-paid salaried workers in the United States and Pennsylvania should receive overtime pay.

At one point, six out of 10 salaried workers automatically received overtime pay or they could go home after a 40-hour work week. Unfortunately, however, the federal and Pennsylvania salary levels below which all executive, administration and professional workers receive overtime pay have not changed since the mid-1970s. Therefore, fewer than one in 10 salaried workers today is automatically eligible for overtime.

As a result, the 40-hour work week, and the right to overtime pay, have been taken away from nearly half a million Pennsylvania salaried workers. Hundreds of thousands of department managers at big box stores, fast food shift supervisors, paralegals in law firms, manufacturing team leaders, office managers, and other salaried workers work for free over 40 hours. They often work 50 or 60 hours per week for an effective hourly rate of $10 per hour or less even though they perform the same duties as hourly personnel for most of their work week.

Fortunately, just as states have the right to establish a minimum wage higher than the federal minimum wage, they also have the right to set a higher overtime threshold. Neighboring New York has already updated its thresholds. I applaud Gov. Wolf's proposal that Pennsylvania do the same. I also applaud his decision to phase in this change over three years – giving businesses ample time to adjust. Good Pennsylvania businesses that recognize their employees as their most important asset, such as Altoona-based Sheetz, have already decided to lift their salaries to the level proposed by Gov. Wolf.

Many of the same forces that opposed the 40-hour work week a century ago – and also opposed a minimum wage, child labor laws, health and safety standards and every other requirement that business treat employees decently – will reflexively oppose Gov. Wolf's common-sense proposal. Since the governor's action and authority to make this change is rooted in state law, it should be implemented.

Kim Minger
mingerkim@hotmail.com
1629 colonial drive
Feasterville , Pennsylvania 19053

3202

Kathy Cooper

From: Liz Chacko <info@actionnetwork.org>
Sent: Thursday, July 19, 2018 9:35 PM
To: Smolock, Bryan
Subject: I Support The New Overtime Rule

Bryan Smolock,

I am writing to express my strong support for the regulation proposed by the Pennsylvania Department of Labor and Industry to restore overtime pay for an estimated 465,000 workers by phasing in a requirement that Pennsylvania salaried workers earning below $47,892 automatically be eligible for overtime.

For decades after the passage of federal and state laws on overtime it was accepted that moderately-paid salaried workers in the United States and Pennsylvania should receive overtime pay.

At one point, six out of 10 salaried workers automatically received overtime pay or they could go home after a 40-hour work week. Unfortunately, however, the federal and Pennsylvania salary levels below which all executive, administration and professional workers receive overtime pay have not changed since the mid-1970s. Therefore, fewer than one in 10 salaried workers today is automatically eligible for overtime.

As a result, the 40-hour work week, and the right to overtime pay, have been taken away from nearly half a million Pennsylvania salaried workers. Hundreds of thousands of department managers at big box stores, fast food shift supervisors, paralegals in law firms, manufacturing team leaders, office managers, and other salaried workers work for free over 40 hours. They often work 50 or 60 hours per week for an effective hourly rate of $10 per hour or less even though they perform the same duties as hourly personnel for most of their work week.

Fortunately, just as states have the right to establish a minimum wage higher than the federal minimum wage, they also have the right to set a higher overtime threshold. Neighboring New York has already updated its thresholds. I applaud Gov. Wolf's proposal that Pennsylvania do the same. I also applaud his decision to phase in this change over three years – giving businesses ample time to adjust. Good Pennsylvania businesses that recognize their employees as their most important asset, such as Altoona-based Sheetz, have already decided to lift their salaries to the level proposed by Gov. Wolf.

Many of the same forces that opposed the 40-hour work week a century ago – and also opposed a minimum wage, child labor laws, health and safety standards and every other requirement that business treat employees decently – will reflexively oppose Gov. Wolf's common-sense proposal. Since the governor's action and authority to make this change is rooted in state law, it should be implemented.

Liz Chacko

liz\_m\_chacko@yahoo.com

1127 Watkins

Philadelphia , Pennsylvania 19148

Kathy Cooper

3202

From: Kathleen Dorrian <info@actionnetwork.org>
Sent: Thursday, July 19, 2018 6:58 PM
To: Smolock, Bryan
Subject: I Support The New Overtime Rule

Bryan Smolock,

I am writing to express my strong support for the regulation proposed by the Pennsylvania Department of Labor and Industry to restore overtime pay for an estimated 465,000 workers by phasing in a requirement that Pennsylvania salaried workers earning below $47,892 automatically be eligible for overtime.

For decades after the passage of federal and state laws on overtime it was accepted that moderately-paid salaried workers in the United States and Pennsylvania should receive overtime pay.

At one point, six out of 10 salaried workers automatically received overtime pay or they could go home after a 40-hour work week. Unfortunately, however, the federal and Pennsylvania salary levels below which all executive, administration and professional workers receive overtime pay have not changed since the mid-1970s. Therefore, fewer than one in 10 salaried workers today is automatically eligible for overtime.

As a result, the 40-hour work week, and the right to overtime pay, have been taken away from nearly half a million Pennsylvania salaried workers. Hundreds of thousands of department managers at big box stores, fast food shift supervisors, paralegals in law firms, manufacturing team leaders, office managers, and other salaried workers work for free over 40 hours. They often work 50 or 60 hours per week for an effective hourly rate of $10 per hour or less even though they perform the same duties as hourly personnel for most of their work week.

Fortunately, just as states have the right to establish a minimum wage higher than the federal minimum wage, they also have the right to set a higher overtime threshold. Neighboring New York has already updated its thresholds. I applaud Gov. Wolf's proposal that Pennsylvania do the same. I also applaud his decision to phase in this change over three years – giving businesses ample time to adjust. Good Pennsylvania businesses that recognize their employees as their most important asset, such as Altoona-based Sheetz, have already decided to lift their salaries to the level proposed by Gov. Wolf.

Many of the same forces that opposed the 40-hour work week a century ago – and also opposed a minimum wage, child labor laws, health and safety standards and every other requirement that business treat employees decently – will reflexively oppose Gov. Wolf's common-sense proposal. Since the governor's action and authority to make this change is rooted in state law, it should be implemented.

This proposal would really help me and so many other people significantly. Please make this proposal become law.

Sincerely,
Kathleen Dorrian

Kathleen Dorrian
dorrian.ks@gmail.com
1908 Sweetbriar rd.
Morrisville , Pennsylvania 19067

3202

Kathy Cooper

---

From: Robin Sowards <rsowards@usw.org>
Sent: Thursday, July 19, 2018 3:35 PM
To: Smolock, Bryan
Subject: I Support The New Overtime Rule

Bryan Smolock,

I am writing to express my strong support for the regulation proposed by the Pennsylvania Department of Labor and Industry to restore overtime pay for an estimated 465,000 workers by phasing in a requirement that Pennsylvania salaried workers earning below $47,892 automatically be eligible for overtime.

For decades after the passage of federal and state laws on overtime it was accepted that moderately-paid salaried workers in the United States and Pennsylvania should receive overtime pay.

At one point, six out of 10 salaried workers automatically received overtime pay or they could go home after a 40-hour work week. Unfortunately, however, the federal and Pennsylvania salary levels below which all executive, administration and professional workers receive overtime pay have not changed since the mid-1970s. Therefore, fewer than one in 10 salaried workers today is automatically eligible for overtime.

As a result, the 40-hour work week, and the right to overtime pay, have been taken away from nearly half a million Pennsylvania salaried workers. Hundreds of thousands of department managers at big box stores, fast food shift supervisors, paralegals in law firms, manufacturing team leaders, office managers, and other salaried workers work for free over 40 hours. They often work 50 or 60 hours per week for an effective hourly rate of $10 per hour or less even though they perform the same duties as hourly personnel for most of their work week.

Fortunately, just as states have the right to establish a minimum wage higher than the federal minimum wage, they also have the right to set a higher overtime threshold. Neighboring New York has already updated its thresholds. I applaud Gov. Wolf's proposal that Pennsylvania do the same. I also applaud his decision to phase in this change over three years – giving businesses ample time to adjust. Good Pennsylvania businesses that recognize their employees as their most important asset, such as Altoona-based Sheetz, have already decided to lift their salaries to the level proposed by Gov. Wolf.

Many of the same forces that opposed the 40-hour work week a century ago – and also opposed a minimum wage, child labor laws, health and safety standards and every other requirement that business treat employees decently – will reflexively oppose Gov. Wolf's common-sense proposal. Since the governor's action and authority to make this change is rooted in state law, it should be implemented.

Robin Sowards
rsowards@usw.org
7239 Whipple St
Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania 15218

3202

Kathy Cooper

---

From: Jay Walker <info@actionnetwork.org>
Sent: Thursday, July 19, 2018 3:33 PM
To: Smolock, Bryan
Subject: I Support The New Overtime Rule

Bryan Smolock,

I am writing to express my strong support for the regulation proposed by the Pennsylvania Department of Labor and Industry to restore overtime pay for an estimated 465,000 workers by phasing in a requirement that Pennsylvania salaried workers earning below $47,892 automatically be eligible for overtime.

For decades after the passage of federal and state laws on overtime it was accepted that moderately-paid salaried workers in the United States and Pennsylvania should receive overtime pay.

At one point, six out of 10 salaried workers automatically received overtime pay or they could go home after a 40-hour work week. Unfortunately, however, the federal and Pennsylvania salary levels below which all executive, administration and professional workers receive overtime pay have not changed since the mid-1970s. Therefore, fewer than one in 10 salaried workers today is automatically eligible for overtime.

As a result, the 40-hour work week, and the right to overtime pay, have been taken away from nearly half a million Pennsylvania salaried workers. Hundreds of thousands of department managers at big box stores, fast food shift supervisors, paralegals in law firms, manufacturing team leaders, office managers, and other salaried workers work for free over 40 hours. They often work 50 or 60 hours per week for an effective hourly rate of $10 per hour or less even though they perform the same duties as hourly personnel for most of their work week.

Fortunately, just as states have the right to establish a minimum wage higher than the federal minimum wage, they also have the right to set a higher overtime threshold. Neighboring New York has already updated its thresholds. I applaud Gov. Wolf's proposal that Pennsylvania do the same. I also applaud his decision to phase in this change over three years – giving businesses ample time to adjust. Good Pennsylvania businesses that recognize their employees as their most important asset, such as Altoona-based Sheetz, have already decided to lift their salaries to the level proposed by Gov. Wolf.

Many of the same forces that opposed the 40-hour work week a century ago – and also opposed a minimum wage, child labor laws, health and safety standards and every other requirement that business treat employees decently – will reflexively oppose Gov. Wolf's common-sense proposal. Since the governor's action and authority to make this change is rooted in state law, it should be implemented.

Jay Walker

jaiwalker3@gmail.com

5806 Howe St. Apartment 1

Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania 15232

3202

Kathy Cooper

---

From: Naomi Littell <info@actionnetwork.org>
Sent: Thursday, July 19, 2018 2:26 PM
To: Smolock, Bryan
Subject: I Support The New Overtime Rule

Bryan Smolock,

I am writing to express my strong support for the regulation proposed by the Pennsylvania Department of Labor and Industry to restore overtime pay for an estimated 465,000 workers by phasing in a requirement that Pennsylvania salaried workers earning below $47,892 automatically be eligible for overtime.

For decades after the passage of federal and state laws on overtime it was accepted that moderately-paid salaried workers in the United States and Pennsylvania should receive overtime pay.

At one point, six out of 10 salaried workers automatically received overtime pay or they could go home after a 40-hour work week. Unfortunately, however, the federal and Pennsylvania salary levels below which all executive, administration and professional workers receive overtime pay have not changed since the mid-1970s. Therefore, fewer than one in 10 salaried workers today is automatically eligible for overtime.

As a result, the 40-hour work week, and the right to overtime pay, have been taken away from nearly half a million Pennsylvania salaried workers. Hundreds of thousands of department managers at big box stores, fast food shift supervisors, paralegals in law firms, manufacturing team leaders, office managers, and other salaried workers work for free over 40 hours. They often work 50 or 60 hours per week for an effective hourly rate of $10 per hour or less even though they perform the same duties as hourly personnel for most of their work week.

Fortunately, just as states have the right to establish a minimum wage higher than the federal minimum wage, they also have the right to set a higher overtime threshold. Neighboring New York has already updated its thresholds. I applaud Gov. Wolf's proposal that Pennsylvania do the same. I also applaud his decision to phase in this change over three years – giving businesses ample time to adjust. Good Pennsylvania businesses that recognize their employees as their most important asset, such as Altoona-based Sheetz, have already decided to lift their salaries to the level proposed by Gov. Wolf.

Many of the same forces that opposed the 40-hour work week a century ago – and also opposed a minimum wage, child labor laws, health and safety standards and every other requirement that business treat employees decently – will reflexively oppose Gov. Wolf's common-sense proposal. Since the governor's action and authority to make this change is rooted in state law, it should be implemented.

Naomi Littell

yowsxza@yahoo.com

514 N 41st St

Philadelphia, Colorado PA 19104

3202

From: Meghan Horn <info@actionnetwork.org>
Sent: Thursday, July 19, 2018 10:44 AM
To: Smollock, Bryan
Subject: I Support The New Overtime Rule

Bryan Smollock,

I am writing to express my strong support for the regulation proposed by the Pennsylvania Department of Labor and Industry to restore overtime pay for an estimated 465,000 workers by phasing in a requirement that Pennsylvania salaried workers earning below $47,892 automatically be eligible for overtime.

For decades after the passage of federal and state laws on overtime it was accepted that moderately-paid salaried workers in the United States and Pennsylvania should receive overtime pay.

At one point, six out of 10 salaried workers automatically received overtime pay or they could go home after a 40-hour work week. Unfortunately, however, the federal and Pennsylvania salary levels below which all executive, administration and professional workers receive overtime pay have not changed since the mid-1970s. Therefore, fewer than one in 10 salaried workers today is automatically eligible for overtime.

As a result, the 40-hour work week, and the right to overtime pay, have been taken away from nearly half a million Pennsylvania salaried workers. Hundreds of thousands of department managers at big box stores, fast food shift supervisors, paralegals in law firms, manufacturing team leaders, office managers, and other salaried workers work for free over 40 hours. They often work 50 or 60 hours per week for an effective hourly rate of $10 per hour or less even though they perform the same duties as hourly personnel for most of their work week.

Fortunately, just as states have the right to establish a minimum wage higher than the federal minimum wage, they also have the right to set a higher overtime threshold. Neighboring New York has already updated its thresholds. I applaud Gov. Wolf's proposal that Pennsylvania do the same. I also applaud his decision to phase in this change over three years – giving businesses ample time to adjust. Good Pennsylvania businesses that recognize their employees as their most important asset, such as Altoona-based Sheetz, have already decided to lift their salaries to the level proposed by Gov. Wolf.

Many of the same forces that opposed the 40-hour work week a century ago – and also opposed a minimum wage, child labor laws, health and safety standards and every other requirement that business treat employees decently – will reflexively oppose Gov. Wolf's common-sense proposal. Since the governor's action and authority to make this change is rooted in state law, it should be implemented.

Meghan Horn
meghanhorn89@gmail.com
14 Pond Lane
Levittown, Pennsylvania 19054

3202

Kathy Cooper

---

From: Smolock, Bryan <bsmolock@pa.gov>
Sent: Friday, July 20, 2018 12:28 PM
To: Kathy Cooper; IRRRC
Cc: Rapach, Jennifer Buchanan; Haffner, Garrett; Schramm, Robert (LI-OCC)
Subject: FW: I Support The New Overtime Rule

From: Carol Rogers [<mailto:info@actionnetwork.org>]
Sent: Friday, July 20, 2018 8:28 AM
To: Smolock, Bryan <bsmolock@pa.gov>
Subject: I Support The New Overtime Rule

Bryan Smolock,

I am writing to express my strong support for the regulation proposed by the Pennsylvania Department of Labor and Industry to restore overtime pay for an estimated 465,000 workers by phasing in a requirement that Pennsylvania salaried workers earning below $47,892 automatically be eligible for overtime.

For decades after the passage of federal and state laws on overtime it was accepted that moderately-paid salaried workers in the United States and Pennsylvania should receive overtime pay.

At one point, six out of 10 salaried workers automatically received overtime pay or they could go home after a 40-hour work week. Unfortunately, however, the federal and Pennsylvania salary levels below which all executive, administration and professional workers receive overtime pay have not changed since the mid-1970s. Therefore, fewer than one in 10 salaried workers today is automatically eligible for overtime.

As a result, the 40-hour work week, and the right to overtime pay, have been taken away from nearly half a million Pennsylvania salaried workers. Hundreds of thousands of department managers at big box stores, fast food shift supervisors, paralegals in law firms, manufacturing team leaders, office managers, and other salaried workers work for free over 40 hours. They often work 50 or 60 hours per week for an effective hourly rate of $10 per hour or less even though they perform the same duties as hourly personnel for most of their work week.

Fortunately, just as states have the right to establish a minimum wage higher than the federal minimum wage, they also have the right to set a higher overtime threshold. Neighboring New York has already updated its thresholds. I applaud Gov. Wolf's proposal that Pennsylvania do the same. I also applaud his decision to phase in this change over three years – giving businesses ample time to adjust. Good Pennsylvania businesses that recognize their employees as their most important asset, such as Altoona-based Sheetz, have already decided to lift their salaries to the level proposed by Gov. Wolf.

Many of the same forces that opposed the 40-hour work week a century ago – and also opposed a minimum wage, child labor laws, health and safety standards and every other requirement that business treat employees decently – will reflexively oppose Gov. Wolf's common-sense proposal. Since the governor's action and authority to make this change is rooted in state law, it should be implemented.

Carol Rogers

carolrogers68@aol.com

4912 Knox st

Philadelphia, Pennsylvania 19144