To Whom this may Concern:

As government you have the power to regulate whatever you want. Having remembered the way you ran the steel industry out in the seventies and more recent the coal industry You now seem to have taken on the farm community each community is a low percentage of the total but you have effectively diminished most jobs in the production and manufacturing area and you're starting to approach 50% which in a democracy may start to be your demise. The farm community is struggling in Pennsylvania in a very rough way And the fees that you charge will be much harder on small family farms then corporate farming. This will probably affect me and not business negatively. I would like to see more focus on the end result rather than just on policy. The ones making new rules need to have a better understanding in real life on the farm problems. Rules are being enforced that when put into effect are not having positive ends results.
