In the interests of combatting climate change and mitigating the ongoing impact of climate change on the health and safety of the state and region, I support the efforts contained in the proposed rule and endorse the continuing efforts of the regional group to develop strategies that take a responsive regional approach to this most urgent of problems facing the world. We need to develop measures to curb emissions, not enable unchecked emissions.

We do not have unlimited time in which to act to decrease emissions. Having a responsible, state and regional strategy will work well with the federal approach and global approach being developed by the incoming administration of President-elect Biden.
