Man made CO2 is not a real problem and is not the reason we have had global warming for a number of years. The warming and cooling cycles of the earth are caused by the multi year solar cycles. When I was in high school in the mid 1960's, there was news coverage of us going into a new ice age because of the earth cooling. This turned out to be a problem of extrapolating a solar cycle too far into the future. The global warming advocates have done the same for the recent warming cycle. The warming cycle is about over now and it is time to go back to a cooling cycle. The people advocating controlling CO2 just want to use fraudulent science to control other people and their business activity for no legitimate reason. We should definitely not join the RGGI and raise the electric rates.
